ITC4182 Professional Practices in ICT
Assignment 2

Professional organizations play a vital role in shaping the Information and Communication Technology (ICT) industry by promoting standards, ethics, professional development, and global collaboration. This assignment requires you to investigate selected local or international ICT professional bodies and critically analyze their contributions to the profession, as well as the benefits of membership for ICT professionals including undergraduates.

Assignment Task

1. Select Professional Organizations (Minimum 4)

Choose at least four (4) well-established international or local professional organizations related to ICT. Examples include but are not limited to:

- IEEE (Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers)
- ACM (Association for Computing Machinery)
- ACS (Australian Computer Society)
- BCS (British Computer Society)
- SLASSCOM (Sri Lanka Association for Software Services Companies)
- CSSL (Computer Society of Sri Lanka)

You may select any organization as long as it is directly relevant to ICT.

2. Compare the Professional Organizations

Conduct a structured comparison of the selected organizations. Your comparison should include the following aspects:

a) Focus and Objectives

- What is the primary mission and vision of each organization?
- What sectors or ICT domains do they focus on (e.g., software engineering, cybersecurity, networking, AI/ML, IT governance)?

b) Key Activities and Services

- Discuss the major activities carried out by each organization, such as:
 - Conferences, seminars, and workshops
 - Certifications and professional qualifications
 - Research publications and journals
 - Student chapters and community-building events
 - Policy development and industry collaboration

c) Code of Conduct and Code of Ethics

- Analyze:
 - Ethical guidelines and professional behavior expectations
 - How codes of ethics influence ICT practices
 - Responsibilities toward employers, clients, society, and the profession
 - Mechanisms for maintaining ethical standards and discipline

d) Membership Structure

(Optional but recommended)

- Types of memberships (student, associate, professional, fellow, corporate)
- Requirements and fees

3. Analyse the Benefits for ICT Undergraduates and Graduates

Provide a detailed analysis of how joining these organizations benefits ICT students and young professionals.

4. Present Findings in a Structured Report

Your report should include the following sections,

- Introduction to ICT Professional Organizations
- Overview of Selected Organizations
- Comparative Analysis (focus, activities, ethics, etc.)
- Benefits for ICT Undergraduates and Graduates
- Critical Evaluation / Reflection
- Conclusion
- References (Harvard style)

Length: Maximum 1500 words.
